Automating Data Validation with Pelican’s Zero Factor Features: Undoubtedly, data validation stands as a crucial aspect of every cloud migration endeavor. Its absence renders a migration project incomplete. With the increasing trend of data migration to the cloud among organizations, the necessity for post-migration data validation escalates. This validation phase is indispensable for assessing data integrity, thereby averting potential downtime and costly mishaps.

Following migration, the presence of inaccurate or subpar data poses a significant threat to a company's decision-making processes and operational efficiency. Despite this reality, many companies persist in employing traditional validation techniques, which are not only time-consuming but also prone to errors.

In light of these considerations, it becomes evident that the manual approach to data validation is inefficient within the contemporary business landscape.
